NOTES ON PRAJNĀPĀRAMITĀ TEXTS

1. Conze's translation of the Aṣṭasāhasrikā-prajñāpāṛamitā-sūtra.

Edward Conze's translation of the Astasāhasrikā was first published in 1958 as Work Number 284 (Issue Number 1578) of the Bibliotheca Indica. According to Conze's preface the new edition of his translation (The Perfection of Wisdom in Eight Thousand Lines & Its Verse Summary, Four Seasons Foundation, Bolinas, 1973) contains numerous corrections.

Bibliographical information on editions, translations, etc. of the A [=Aṣṭaṣāhaṣrikā] is to be found in Conze's The Prajñāpāramitā Literature ('s-Gravenhage, 1960), pp. 51-52. A useful supplement to Conze's book on the Prajñāpāramitā literature is Hanayama Shōyū's article on Japanese studies: A Summary of Various Research on the Prajñāpāramitā Literature by Japanese Scholars, Acta Asiatica, 10 (Tokyo, 1966), pp. 16-93.

Conze's translation of A does not contain any notes and for his interpretation of the vocabulary of A and other Prajñāpāramitā texts it is necessary to consult his Materials for a Dictionary of the Prajñāpāramitā Literature (Tokyo, 1967) ¹. Very useful for the elucidation of difficult places in A is Haribhadra's commentary, the Abhisamayālaṃkārālokā, edited by U. Wogihara (Tokyo, 1932-1935; reprinted in 1973). Wogihara's edition contains the complete text of A and gives page references to Mitra's edition. Haribhadra's commentary dates from the eighth century. According to Mano Ryūkai Haribhadra lived roughly from 730 to 795 ². Of a much later date is another commentary, which has been preserved in Sanskrit, the Sāratamā (or Sārottamā) of Ratnākaraśānti who, according to P.S. Jaini,

^{1.} For a supplement see Edward Conze (ed., tr.), The Gilgit Manuscript of the Aṣṭādaśasāhasrikāprajñāpāramitā. Chapters 70-82 corresponding to the 6th, 7th and 8th abhisamayas (Serie Orientale Roma, XLVI, 1974), pp. 245-254.

^{2.} Cf. Mano Ryūkai, Genkan shōgonron no kenkyū (Tōkyō, 1972), p. 17.

lived in the first half of the eleventh century. We must await Jaini's edition of this text in order to know how much help it offers for a better understanding of A³.

To the translation, mentioned by Conze in his book on Prajñāpāramitā literature, one must add two translations into Japanese, which have been published recently: a translation of chapters 1, 2, 3 and 30 by Hirakawa Akira (Nakamura Hajime ed., Butten vol. II Tōkyō, 1965, pp. 305-358) and the first volume (chapters 1-11) of a complete translation by Kajiyama Yūichi (Nagao Gajin ed., Daijō butten vol. 2; Hassenjuhannyakyō I, Tōkyō, 1974). Kajiyama's translation reached me after I had written the following notes on Conze's translation. Therefore it was not possible for me to study it in detail. However, I have been able to quote a few passages from it.

Buddhist scholars owe a great debt of gratitude to Edward Conze for his work on the Prajñāpāramitā literature. In the West the Prajñāpāramitā texts have been rather neglected in the past. It is the great merit of Edward Conze to have realized the importance of these texts and to have contributed much to a better knowledge of them by his numerous editions, translations and studies. His work has laid a solid foundation for further research in this field. It is generally acknowledged that, among the Praiñāpāramitā texts. A occupies a very important place. For this reason the new edition of Conze's translation is a very welcome opportunity to make some notes on his translation as a small contribution to the study of the Prajñāpāramitā literature. The notes follow the order of the text, referring first to the pages of Conze's translation and, between parentheses, to the pages of Wogihara's edition (the page references to Mitra's edition are taken from Wogihara's edition). The problems, discussed in these notes, are of a different order. Some point out obvious mistakes or omissions in Conze's translation. Others discuss in more detail difficult expressions or passages without an attempt to suggest a definitive solution. Finally, I would like to draw attention to the fact that the publication of these notes is entirely due to the insistence of Edward Conze himself who prompted me to publish them instead of communicating them to him by letter.

Sigla and abbreviations

A = Astasāhasrikā-prajñāpāramitā-sūtra.

AA = Abhisamayālamkārālokā

BHSD = Franklin Edgerton, Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit Dictionary. New Haven, 1953.

^{3.} Cf. Padmanabh S. Jaini, The Ālokā of Haribhadra and the Sāratamā of Ratnākaraśānti: a comparative study of the two commentaries of the Aṣṭasāhasrikā, BSOAS, 35 (1972), pp. 271-284.

BHSG = Franklin Edgerton, Buddhist Hybrid Sanskrit Grammar. New Haven, 1953.

C = Conze's translation of A.

H = Haribhadra.

Kajiyama = Kajiyama's translation of A, vol. I (chapters 1-11). Tōkyō, 1974.

M = Edward Conze, Materials for a Dictionary of the Prajñāpāramitā Literature. Tokyo, 1967.

Mi. = R. Mitra's edition of A. Calcutta, 1888.

MW = M. Monier-Williams, A Sanskrit-English Dictionary. Oxford, 1899.

P = Pañcavimśatisāhasrikā-prajñāpāramitā-sūtra.

PW = Petersburger Wörterbuch, 1855-1875.

T = Tibetan translation, Lhasa Kanjur.

 $TD = Taish\bar{o} \ daiz\bar{o}ky\bar{o}$. Tōkyō, 1924-1934.

W = Wogihara's edition of the Abhisamayālaṃkārālokā.

Wall. = M. Walleser's partial translation of A. Prajñāpāramitā. Die Vollkommenheit der Erkenntnis. Göttingen-Leipzig, 1914.

P. 85 (W 44; Mi. 7): etad eva Bhagavan kaukrtyam syāt yo 'ham vastv avidann anupalabhamāno 'samanupasyan nāmadheyamātren' āyavyayam kuryām yad uta bodhisattva iti — C « It would surely be regrettable if I, unable to find the thing itself, should merely in words cause a Bodhisattva to arise and to pass away ». H explains $\bar{a}ya$ and vyaya by vidhi « affirmation » and nisedha « denial ». The same explanation is given by H in his Sphutārthā in explaining āya-vyaya in AA, 284, cf. E. Obermiller, Analysis of the Abhisamayālamkāra, Fasc. I (London, 1933), p. 65, n. 3; Mano Ryūkai, op. cit., p. 110. Obermiller remarks that Tson-kha-pa explains āya-vyaya ('du-'god) as « appearing and disappearing »: 'du-'god skye-'jig dan bral-ba'i gzugs-sogs. The Lankavatara interprets aya and vyaya as « origination » and « destruction » (vināśa), cf. p. 175. 16-18 and BHSD s.v. āya. Vimuktisena, too, in commenting on a passage of P: rūpasyāham Bhagavann āyam 5 ca vyayam ca nopalabhe na samanupaśyāmi (ed N. Dutt p. 124. 6) gives the same explanation: tatrāyam utpādo, vyayo nirodhah (Abhisamayālamkāravrtti, ed. C. Pensa, Roma, 1967, p. 57. 16-17). Haribhadra's explanation seems not to be supported by other texts or commentaries. Kumārajīva translates āya-vyaya in A 7 by « coming and going » (TD 227, p. 537 b 28). Kajiyama (p.12) translates āya-vyaya with « origination and destruction », but adds in parentheses: « i.e. affirmation and denial ».

^{4.} In M s.v. aya read AA i 28 for AA i 18.

^{5.} In Pensa's edition of the Abhisamayālamkāravrtti (p. 57.5) read Bhagavann āyam for Bhagavan nāyam.

- P. 96 (W 131; Mi. 33): baddhasīmāno hi te saṃsārasrotasaḥ C « The flood of birth-and-death hems them in ». The Arhats are incapable of rebirth because « they have put a limit to the stream of transmigration ». H explains srotasaḥ as an abl.: saṃsārasrotaso janmapravāhād baddhasīmāno 'nutpattidharmatayā kṛtamāryādāḥ. T translates srotasaḥ as an abl.: de-dag-gis 'khor-ba'i rgyun-las mtshams bcad-pas (29 b 7). However, srotasaḥ is undoubtedly a gen. and not an abl. Kumārajīva-translates: « because they have made a dam in birth and death » (TD 227, 540 a 19), Hsüan-tsang « because they made a boundary partition in the stream of birth and death » (TD 220, 769 c 20). Conze's translation is probably due to a misunderstanding of baddha which, of course, has an active sense as in baddhavaira, etc. See also Suvikrāntavikrāmi-paripṛcchā (ed. R. Hikata, Fukuoka, 1958), p. 58.3-4: kṛtaparyantāś ca saṃsāraśrotasaḥ (T 'khor-ba'i rgyud mthar byas-pa) « they have put an end to the stream of transmigration ».
- P. 99 (W 163; Mi. 41): atha khalu Sakro devānām indras tasyām velāyām puspāny abhinirmāy' āyusmantam Subhūtim abhyavākirat / atha khalv āyusmatah Subhūteh sthavirasya Sakram devānām indram anu vyāharanāyaitad abhūt. — C «Sakra then conjured up flowers, and scattered them over the Venerable Subhuti. The Venerable Subhuti thought to himself by way of reply ». Conze seems to read anuvyāharanāya, cf. M s.v. vy-ā-harati: anu-vyāharana, reply, A ii 41. T also has read anuvyāharanāya (brgya-byin-la rjes-su brjod-pa'i phyir). However, it is obvious from Haribhadra's commentary that he considers anu to be a postposition: Indram anu vyäharanäyeti anusabdo laksanärthe (cf. Pānini 1.4.84: anur laksane). The only meaning given by PW for anuvyāharana is « repeatedly stating » (das wiederholte Hersagen). It seems better to separate anu and vyāharanāya as has been done by W in his edition and to translate vyāharana by « utterance » and not by « answer ». It is not easy to understand the exact meaning of Indram anu. Probably one must understand that Indram implies the magical creation of the flowers by Indra: « Then Subhūti conceived the following thought in conformity with [the action of] Indra ». According to H Subhūti uses the explanation of the true nature of the magically created flowers as a pretext for teaching the essence of the substratum: nirmitapuspatattvakathanavyājen' ādhārasvarūpasya pratipādanāyaitad vaksyamānārthānukāri cittam abhūd iti.
- P. 107 (W 216; Mi. 61): iyam eva prajñāpāramitā sukham abhīkṣṇaṃ śrotavyā C « he should indefatigably and continually hear ... this very perfection of wisdom ». H explains correctly that sukham here means « without effort » (anāyāsam).
- P. 107 (W 216; Mi. 61): $tisthato\ v\bar{a}\ Kausika\ parinirvṛtasya\ v\bar{a}\ Tath\bar{a}-gatasya$ C « when the Tathagata has disappeared into final Nirvana ». Conze omits $tisthato\ v\bar{a}$: « Whether the Tathāgata remains or has entered into final Nirvāṇa ».
- P. 110 (W 242; Mi. 77-78): nāham Sāriputra teṣām anyatīrthyānām parivrājakānām ekasyāpi śuklam dharmam samanupaśyāmi C « Because I saw not even one pure dharma in those Wanderers ». — « Because I saw no pure dharma in even one of those Wanderers ».

- P. 112 (W 252; Mi. 84): mā khalu mām kaścit paryanuyuñjītopārambhābhiprāya iti C « They will have no fear of being plied with questions by hostile persons ». A few lines further Conze translates paryanuyoga with « censure » (p. 113, l.1) cf. also M s.v. paryanuyoga. H (p. 40.3; 252.23) glosses paryanuyoga with codyam « objection ». The meaning « censure » is given by PW with reference to Halāyudha and the Mitākṣarā but in Buddhist texts paryanuyoga seems to have always the meaning « questioning, raising objections », cf. Abhidharmakośa (ed. P. Pradhan) p. 471.10: paudgalikas tu paryanuyojyaḥ (T rgal-zhin brtag-par bya), tr. L. de La Vallée Poussin (IX, p. 269): « Interrogeons à notre tour le partisan du moi ». The same Tibetan equivalent (brgal-zhin brtag-pa) is given in the Mahāvyutpatti for paryanuyoga (No. 7197). In Vimuktisena's Abhisamayālaṃkāravṛtti (p. 56.19) paryānuyoga is a misprint for paryanuyoga.
- P. 118 (W 276; Mi. 98): evam eva Bhagavan prajñāpāramitāyā ete guṇāh sarvajñajñānasya ca C « O Lord, the qualities of the cognition of the all-knowing are derived from the perfection of wisdom ». « Such are those qualities of the perfection of wisdom and of the knowledge of the all-knowing one ».
- P. 118 (W 277; Mi. 98-99): yathā ca Bhagavan rājapuruṣo rājānubhavāt mahato janakāyasyākutobhayaḥ pūjyaḥ C « As a king should be worshipped, because his royal might gives courage to a great body of people ». « As a servant of the king fears nothing on account of the power of the king and is honoured by a great body of people ». Just as the rājapuruṣa is honoured on account of the king, the preacher of the dharma is honoured on account of the dharmakāya.
- P. 121 (W 298; Mi. 112): mā praṇaṃkṣīt C « should beware of making obeisance to it ». Cf. Edgerton BHSG 32.83: AsP 112.17 (prose) has praṇaṅkṣīt, from naś 'perish', wich has no s-aorist in Skt.; H: mā viṇaṣṭo bhaviṣyati.
- P. 130 (W 358; Mi. 153-154) tryadhvatraidhātukāparyāpannatvāt tathaiva parināmo 'py aparyāpannaḥ C « For everything that is in the three periods of time or in the triple world is unincluded [in ultimate reality]. In consequence the turning over is also unincluded ». The preceding passage explains that one should turn over with the understanding that morality, etc. are unincluded in the triple world and in the three periods of time: « because [all that, i.e. morality, etc.] is unincluded in the three periods of time and in the triple world the turning over is also unincluded ». Hsüan-tsang translates: « because these dharmas (śīla, etc.) are svabhāvasūnya, therefore they are unincluded in the triple world and in the three periods of time. The turning over is also of such nature ». (TD 220, p. 795 a 13-14). Traidhātuka is « the triple world », not that which is in the triple world (cf. BHSD s.v.). Conze's explanation of traidhātuka in M has to be corrected accordingly. Conze's translation is probably influenced by H: tryadhvatraidhātukasya tattvenānutpādād aparyāpannatve katham tatra sthitah parināma iti « because in reality the triple world does not originate [everything] is unincluded in it. How then can the turning over repose in it »? This interpretation corresponds to H's commentary on the preceding passage: traidhātukāparyāpannaparināmamanaskāram pratipādayann āha (p. 358.13). See also Kajiyama (p. 186): « For (morality, etc., which are svabhāvasūnya) are not included in the three periods of time and in the triple world ».

- P. 130 (W 359; Mi. 154): atha tam parināmayati nivisate C « when he settles down in what he turns over ». The text must be corrected: atha tam parināmam abhinivisate (T de-ste yons-su bsno-ba de-la mnon-par chags-sin) « when he settles down in the turning over », cf. H: aparyāpanna ity abhiniveso.
- P. 140 (W 398; Mi. 181): ye kecid imām gambhīrām prajñāpāramitām pratibādhitavyām maṃsyante nāhaṃ Sāriputraivaṃrūpāṇām pudgalānām darśanam apy abhyanujānāmi / kutas taiḥ saha saṃvāsaṃ kuto vā lābhasatkāraṃ kutaḥ sthānaṃ C « All those who oppose this perfection of wisdom and dissuade others from it are persons to whom I do not grant any vision. How can one become intimate with them, how can they gain wealth, honour and position »? « As to those who oppose this perfection of wisdom and dissuade others from it, I do not allow you even to see such persons, how much less to dwell together with them, how much less [to give them] wealth and honour, how much less [to give them] high positions ». Kajiyama (p. 218) translates taiḥ saha saṃvāsaṃ with « to become intimate with them » and sthānaṃ with « to dwell together ». However, his rendering of sthānaṃ does not seem appropriate.
- P. 140 (W 399; Mi. 182): Sāriputra āha / na bhagavatā tasya pudgalasya tatropapannasya mahānirayagatasy' ātmabhāvasya pramāṇam ākhyātaṃ / Bhagavān āha / tiṣṭhatu Sāriputra tasya pudgalasya tatropapannasya mahānirayagatasy' ātmabhāvasya pramāṇaṃ / tat kasya hetoḥ / mā tathārāpasya pudgalasya tad ātmabhāvasya pramāṇaṃ śrutvā uṣṇaṃ rudhiraṃ mukhād āgacchet ... maiva mahāpratibhayaṃ tasy' ātmabhāvasya pramāṇam aśrauṣīt yasyeme doṣāḥ samvidyante C « Sariputra: the Lord has not told us about the length of time such a person must spend in the great hells. The Lord: Leave that alone, Sariputra. If this were announced those who hear it would have to beware lest hot blood spurt out of their mouths ... lest they be overpowered by a great fright ». « The Lord: Leave that alone, Sāriputra. Why? Lest hot blood spurt from the mouth of such a person after hearing the length of time (he has to spend in the great hells). Lest he who is guilty of these sins, hear that frightful length of time ».
- P. 151 (W 445; Mi. 204-205): asatpāramiteyam Bhagavann ākāśa-asattām (W sattām but T nam-mkha' ma mchis-pa; H ākāśasyeva nityarūpenāsattām) upādāya. C « This is a perfection of what is not, because space is not something that is ». H explains that the prajāāpāramitā is an asatprajāāpāramitā because its non-existence is similar to that of space. Cf. Wall.: « Dieses ist die Vollkommenheit eines Nichtseienden mit Hinsicht auf das Nichtsein des Weltraums » (p. 78).

- P. 151 (W 446; Mi. 205): asamhāryapāramiteyam C « One cannot partake of this perfection » — One cannot take away this perfection » Conze has translated asamhārya in many different ways cf. M s.v. asamhārya. However, in all the passages, quoted by him, asamhārya has no meanings other than « cannot be taken away, cannot be overwhelmed ». This becomes clear by examining the following passages of A. P. 184 (W 583; Mi. 285): yena bodhisattvena ... prajňāpāramitā ... paripraśnīkṛtā ca bhavaty ekam vā dinam dve vā trīni vā catvāri vā pañca vā dināni tasya tāvatkālikī śraddhā bhavati samhriyate ca punar evāsamhāryā ca bhavati pariprechayā — C « Another Bodhisattva, again, has asked questions about this perfection of wisdom, for one, two, three, four or five days, and now only for a certain time he has faith in it, but afterwards it is withdrawn again and he no longer feels like asking questions about it ». - « ... and his faith remains only for such a time and then it is withdrawn but by questioning it becomes again a faith which cannot be taken away » P. 202 (W 675; Mi. 329): bhiksuh ksīnāsravo na parasya śraddhayā gacchati dharmatāyām pratyaksakārī asamhāryo bhavati Mārena pāpīyasā — C « a monk whose outflows are dried up, does not go by someone else whom he puts his trust in, but he has placed the nature of dharma (read dharmatām for dharmatāyām?) directly before his own eyes, and Mara has no access to him ». - « ... and Māra cannot overwhelm him » (cf. W 762; Mi. 380: te bodhisattvā mahāsattvā asamhāryāh sadevamānusāsurena lokena). H glosses: anapaharanīyatvād asamhāryah. P. 209 (W 695; Mi. 341): anantam aparyantam jñānam pratilabdham asamhāryam sarvaśrāvakapratyekabuddhaih — C « he has gained a cognition which is endless and boundless, and to which Disciples and Pratyekabuddhas have no claim ». - « ... and which cannot be taken away by Disciples and Pratyekabuddhas ». (H sarvalokākampyatvenāsamhāryam). In PW samhārya is translated as « dem man Etwas zukommen lassen muss, Ansprüche habend auf » with a reference to Mahābhārata 13,2538: bhūyo bhūyo 'pi samhāryah pitrvittāt, but the Poona edition reads: bhūyo 'pi bhūyasā hāryam pitrvittāt (13.47.38).
- P. 152 (W 450; Mi. 206): asambhinnapāramiteyam Bhagavan sarvadharmāsambhedanatām upādāya C « This perfection is undifferentiated, because all dharmas are ». « ... because all dharmas are undifferentiated ».
- P. 156 (W 474; Mi. 217): tenaiva pūrvakeņa kuśalamūlenopanāmite-yam tasmai gambhīrā prajñāpāramitā C « It is just because of the existence of these wholesome roots in him that this deep perfection of wisdom has bent over to him ». « These wholesome roots, acquired in the past, have brought this deep perfection of wisdom to him ». See also M s.vv. upanāmita and upa-nāmayati.

P. 157 (W 475; Mi. 218): śṛṇvataś cainām [i.e. prajñāpāramitām] ramate cittam asyām prajñāpāramitāyām arthikatayā cotpadyate — C « when he hears it, his thought delights in it, and he becomes desirous of it ». Cf. M s.v. arthikatā: arthikatayā utpadyate « becomes desirous ». One must certainly read arthikam tayā, cf. T ñan-pa na de-la dga'-zhin śes-raḥ-kyi pha-rol-tu phyin-pa la don-du gñer-ba'i sems bskyed-pa (194 b 6).

P. 160 (W 490; Mi. 227): yad utemām evānuttarām samyaksambodhim ārabhya — C « i.e. starting from just this my supreme enlightenment ». A few lines further on Conze translates yad uta ... ārabhya correctly by « i.e. concerning ».

P. 160 (W 491; Mi. 227): asyām prajāāpāramitāyām Mārenāpi te na sakyā bhedayitum kutah punar anyaih sattvaih yad uta cchandato vā mantrato vā — C « They cannot be diverted from it even by Mara, how much less by other beings, whether they use willpower or mantras ». Hexplains that chanda and mantra can refer to the Bodhisattvas or to Māra. In the first case chanda is explained as the sūtrāntamahāyānābhilāṣa, in the second as oṣadhi. Conze adopts the second alternative, but translates chanda by « willpower ». The Sabdakalpadruma indicates that the meaning « poison (viṣa) for chanda is found in a lexicon, the Sabdacandrikā (cf. Th. Zachariae, Die indischen Wörterbücher, Strassburg, 1897, p. 39). If one accepts the second alternative, yad uta has the normal meaning « namely, to wit », but the first alternative is only possible if yad uta has the meaning « because » for which Edgerton adduces one example from the Saddharmapundarīka (cf. BHSD s.v. yad uta 2).

P. 162 (W-502; Mi-233): prajnāpāramitām sarvajnājnānasyāhārikām — C « this perfection of wisdom which nourishes the cognition of the all-knowing ». Āhārika means « bringing about », cf. H. utpādika. Conze seems to derive āhārika from āhāra « food » and not from āhāra « bringing near, procuring », cf. M s.v. āhārika. The correct meaning is to be found in BHSD s.v. āhārika « bringer, that which brings ».

P. 163 (W 504; Mi. 235): so 'ndhakāre hastinam labdhvā yena prakā-sam tenopanidhyāyeta, tenopanidhyāyan hastipadam paryeṣitavyam manyeta — C « In the darkness he would touch and examine the foot of the elephant ». — « Having found an elephant in the darkness, he would examine it where there is light, but examining it there, he would think it fit to examine the footprint of the elephant ». Pada means here the footprint (T rjes, 207 b 4). Both Kumārajīva (TD 227, p. 556 a 18) and Hsüan-tsang (TD 220, p. 810 c 16) have understood pada in this sense. It is normal practice to judge the size of an elephant from his footprint, cf. for instance Majjhimanikāya I, pp. 175-176: Seyyathā pi bho kusalo nāgavaniko nāgavanam paviseyya, so passeyya nāgavane mahantam hatthipadam dīghato ca āyatam tiriyam ca vitthatam, so niṭṭham gaccheya: mahā vata bho nāgo ti.

- P. 166 (W 511; Mi. 241): gulmasthāna C « bathing places ». Conze follows H: gulmasthānam ghattasthānam. A little further on the word gulmadarśana occurs (W 512; Mi. 242). Conze translates it as « troops of soldiers ». A variant reads gulmāksadarśana which is confirmed by T (la-gcan-gyi cho-lo lta-ba, 213 a 3) and by H: gulmāksadarśanam ghattasthāne pāśakādidarśanam. The meaning of gulma is not well established, cf. BHSD gulma « a kind of fee, perhaps transit fee, fee for pass ». In Divyāvadāna 4.12 gulma is translated in Tibetan by bsel-pa'i rnan-pa « charge for escort » (cf. D.R. Shackleton Bailey, « Notes on the Divyāvadāna », JRAS, 1950, p. 168). In translating Divyāvadāna p. 34.13 and p. 501.23 the Tibetan translation uses the expression la-gcan « duties on a ghat or a pass » (cf. H.A. Jäschke, Tibetan-English Dictionary, p. 539 a). The same equivalent was used by the translators of A, cf. M s.v. gulmadarśana. Gulmāksadarśana is mentioned in A after rāja, kumāra, hasti, aśva and ratha. W reads gulmadarśanamanasikārāh but variants read gulmamanasikārāh and gulmāksadarśanamanasikārāh. It is possible that gulmākṣa is a corruption for gulmaka « division of an army (cf. Edgerton s.v.) but darśana is difficult to explain. On gulma see also V.S. Agrawala Vāk 5 (1957), p. 158.
- P. 173 (W 539-540; Mi. 257): saṃkṣiptāni cittāni, vikṣiptāni cittāni—C « collected thoughts, distracted thoughts ». In Lalitavistara p. 151.15 saṃkṣipa and vikṣipa are two adjectives qualifying the thoughts of the beings. Edgerton (BHSD s.v. saṃkṣipa-vikṣipa) interprets them as meaning « narrow, limited » and « wide, extensive ». In the Daśabhūmikasūtra saṃkṣipta is applied twice to the lokadhātu (ed. J. Rahder, p. 15.13: -lokadhātuvipulasaṃkṣipta-; p. 90.21-22: saṃkṣiptāyā lokadhātor vistīrnatām adhitiṣṭhati). In another passage which closely resembles A pp. 257-258 the mind is said to be saṃkṣiptam / vikṣiptaṃ / samāhitam / asamāhitam (ed. R. Kondō p. 57.12). Moreover, saṃkṣipta is rendered in Tibetan by dog-pa « narrow » and in Chinese by « narrow, small », cf. J. Rahder, Glossary of the Daśabhumika-sūtra (Paris, 1928), s.v. saṃkṣipta. The use of saṃkṣipta in this text confirms the interpretation given by Edgerton.
- P. 174 (W 543; Mi. 260): tāni cittāni asatsamkalpāni C « they [i.e. those thoughts] are just a false representation of what is not ». Both H (asattātulyāni) and T (med-pa dan 'dra-ba yin-te) understand samkalpa in the sense of kalpa « like, similar ». Samkalpa cannot be amended to kalpa because Hsüan-tsang (TD 220, p. 815 a 23) has « without discrimination » and therefore it seems better to assume that samkalpa here is used in the sense of kalpa.
- P. 175 (W 549; Mi. 264): $samadar san \bar{a}n i$... $t \bar{a}n i$ $cit t \bar{a}n i$ C « those thoughts look at the same thing ». Both PW and MW indicate that samadar san a has the meaning « of similar appearance, like » only at the end of a compound. However, it is the only meaning which fits this place cf. T $m \bar{n} a n p a r b s t a n p a (232 a 7)$.

- P. 175 (W 550; Mi. 265): tāni cittāni śūnyāny ārambaṇavaśikāni C « those thoughts are empty, devoid of objective support ». Conze's translation is probably based upon the Tibetan which has a negation: midmigs-pa'i dban-du gyur-pa'o (233 a 2). Hsüan-tsang confirms T: « not master over objects » (TD 220, 815 c 25-26). However, H has not read a negation and is therefore obliged to add the word saṃvṛtyā: ālambanavaśikāni saṃvṛty' ālambanaparatantrāṇi. It would be better to render vaśika as « depending on ».
- P. 182 (W 579; Mi. 282); C « Bodhisattvas who resolutely believe ... ». Bodhisattvas should be corrected to « beings » (sattva).
- P. 186 (W 587; Mi. 288): tasyānyena bhandam bhavisyati anyena sā naur vipatsyate iti C « When his ship has burst asunder ». « His goods will be at one place and his ship will perish somewhere else ». Hsüan-tsang (TD 220, p. 820 b 1-2) translates: « men, ship and goods will all be scattered in different places ».
- P. 190 (W 606; Mi. 299): vainayikaviviktasvabhāvās te ... bodhisattvā C « Their own-being is isolated from the need for discipline ». H gives a very far-fetched explanation, cf. M s.v. vainayikaviviktasvabhāva. It seems preferable to translate: « their own-being is disciplined and detached », cf. Hsüan-tsang's translation (TD 220, p. 822 a 19-20): « their own-being is discipline and separation ». T renders vainayika by « deriving from discipline » ('dul-ba las byun-ba, 264 a 7) = vinayaprabhava. The expression vainayikaviviktatā occurs in chapter 27 (C 259; W 847: Mi. 445) but here T translates vainayika by « one to be disciplined » (cf. M s.v.) and Conze translates accordingly vainayikaviviktatā by « the isolatedness of those who should be disciplined ».
- P. 194 (W 642; Mi. 309): iyam mahāpṛthivī ... ṣaḍvikāram aṣṭādaśama-hānimittam akampat C « the great earth shook in six ways ». Conze does not translate aṣṭādaśamahānimittam. According to H these eighteen great signs refer to the division of the six ways of trembling in weak, medium and strong: aṣṭādaśa mahānimittāni punar eṣām eva ṣaṇṇām vikārāṇāṃ mṛdumadhyādhimātrakriyābhedenākampat. I have not seen this mentioned anywhere else.
- P. 201 (W 668; Mi. 325): daśa kuśalān karmapathān nādhyāpadyate C « He never commits offences against those ten precepts ». Edgerton (BHSD s.v. adhyāpadyate) reads daśākuśalān and translates adhyāpadyate with « commits (a sin) ». Both T (284 b 6) and Hsüan-tsang (TD 220, p. 826 a 21) translate daśākuśalān. See also H: nādhyāpadyeta na kuryāt; A 390 (W 777) āpattim adhyāpadya; E. Conze, The Gilgit Manuscript of the Aṣtādaśasāhasrikāprajñāpāramitā. Chapters 70-82 (Roma, 1974), p. 108.3-4: daśākuśalān [ed. daśāku(śa)lāḥ] karmapathān adhyāpadyeta. Read daśākuśalān.
- P. 201 (W 673; Mi. 327): na ca kaṃcid dharmaṃ samanupaśyati yaṃ na dharmadhātunā yojayati sarvam eva ca taṃ prayujyamānaṃ samanupaśyati C « There is not any dharma which he does not see as yoked to the nature of dharmas, and each dharma he sees simply as engaged in that effort ». T translates sarvam eva ca tam prayujyamānam samanupaśyati with thams-cad kyan de-dan ldan-par yan-dag-par mthon-no (286 b 3-4). According to M s.v. prayujyamāna T does not translate prayujyamāna. However, dan-ldan-par certainly corresponds to prayujyamānam. Probably one must read tatprayujyamānam « being yoked to that ». Prayukta is used as an equivalent of samprayukta, cf. M. s.v. prayukta and Suvarnabhāsottamasūtra p. 74.10 (ed. J. Nobel). For this reason I suggest the following translation: « He does not see any dharma which he does not yoke to the nature of dharmas and he sees everything as being yoked to it ».

P. 204 (W 679; Mi. 331): ko 'trāñjāsyati — C « Who can anoint himself for it » — One must read ko 'trājñāsyati, cf. T su-zhig de-la śes-par 'gyur (290 a 4).

P 204 (W 679; Mi. 331): nirarthakam tvam vihanyase — C « it is useless for you to resist». Vihanyate has here the normal meaning «to suffer, to be distressed, to exert oneself in vain », cf. T ñon-mons-so. The same meaning applies to A 403 (W 793; C 239): sattvān ... vihanyamānāmś ca « beings who suffer ». Conze translates: « beings who are doomed to be killed ».

P. 204 (W 680; Mi. 332): vivecanatā — C « critical examination ». See BHSD s.v. vivecayati « causes (one) to abandon, dissuades »: T 'bral-bar byed-pa.

P. 205 (W 686; Mi. 335): abhedavarnavādinas — C « They praise without causing dissension » — « They praise the absence of dissension ».

P. 209 (W 696; Mi. 341): sādhu sādhu Subhūte / yas tvam gambhīrāni gambhīrāni sthānāny ārabhya nigamayitukāmah — C « Well said, Subhuti. You obviously bring up the very deep positions because you want me to change the subject ». The meaning of nigamayati is made clear by H (pratipādayitukāmah) and by T: śes-par bya-bar 'dod-pa (297 b 5): « You desire to be instructed ». Cf. Wall.: « Gut, Gut, Subhūti, der du die überaus tiefen Örter zu Grunde legend ergründen willst ». (p. 106); M. Winternitz, Der Mahāyāna-Buddhismus (Tübingen, 1930): «Gut, gut, Subhūti, dass du in bezug auf die unergründlichen Tiefen etwas zu lernen wünschest » (p. 67).

P. 209 (W 698; Mi. 342): āścaryam Bhagavan yāvat sūkṣmeṇopāyena rūpatas ca nivārito nirvānam ca sūcitam — C « It is wonderful, O Lord, how a subtle device has opened up [or: impeded] form, etc., and indicated Nirvana at the same time». Cf. T gzugs-las kyan bzlog-la mya-nan-las-'das-pa'an bstan-pa (298 b 2). H also understands nivārito in the sense of « kept off from »: tathatāyām rūpādipratisedhād rūpādau pravrttinirākaraṇāya nivāritah. Hsüan-tsang (TD 220, p. 829 b 2-3) translates: « It is wonderful how a subtle device has removed the forms and revealed Nirvāna ». It is difficult to understand m.sg. nivārito instead of n.sg. A similar case occurs in A 422 (W 813): na mayā 'dhyāśayato vikopayitavyah yena ... See below sub P. 247.

- P. 211 (W 705-706; Mi. 346): abhisaṃskāro, puṇyābhisaṃskāro C « accumulation, accumulation of merit ». Also Edgerton proposes this translation but, as indicated by H (abhisaṃskāraś cittābhogo), abhisaṃskāra signifies « performance, accomplishment » and puṇyābhisaṃskāra is the performance of a meritorious deed. It seems better to reserve the translation « accumulation » for samcaya.
- P. 215 (W 729; Mi. 357): asya prajňāpāramitābhyāsatah svapnāntaragatasyāpi C « He also in his dreams remains quite close to perfect wisdom ». Prajňāpāramitābhyāsatah is « because of the cultivation of perfect wisdom », cf. T goms-pa'i (310 a 1).
- P. 222 (W 749; Mi. 370): tathā ca pratyaveksitavyam aviksiptayā cittasamtatyā yathā pratyaveksamāno rūpam iti tām dharmatām dharmatayā na samanupaśyet - C «But he should contemplate that with an undisturbed series of thoughts in such a way, that when he contemplates the fact that « form, etc. is empty », he does not regard that true nature of dharmas [i.e. emptiness] as something which, as a result of its own true nature [i.e. emptiness] is a real entity ». Conze's translation is based upon Haribhadra's commentary: tām dharmatām śūnyatām dharmatayā śūnyatayā rūpam vastv iti pratyaveksamāno yathā na samanupaśyet. Probably dharmatayā has to be translated as a predicative instrumental: « He does not regard that true nature of dharmas as a [really existing] true nature of dharmas ». T translates: chos-ñid de-la chos-ñid-kyi ranbzhin yod-pa yin-no / zhes yan-dag-par rjes-su mi mthon-ba (320 a 3) which corresponds to the following passage in H: śūnyatām śūnyatāsvabhāvenāstīti yathā nopalabheta (T na samanupaśyati cf. W note 3) « he does not consider that emptiness exists in its own nature of emptiness » (śūnyatā replaces here dharmatā). The Tibetan translators seem to have made use of Haribhadra's commentary or some other commentary which gives the same explanation.
- P. 231 (W 774; Mi. 387): apagatapādamrakṣaṇo C « frugal ». Conze translates the commentary and not the text, cf. H: alpecchatvād apagatapādamrakṣaṇaḥ.
- P. 246 (W 812; Mi. 419): aniṣṭatvāya (W has anirdiṣṭatvāya but see H p. 814.23) C « conditions which are unserviceable ». « Conditions which are undesirable ».
- P. 247 (W 813; Mi. 422): na mayā 'dhyāśayato vikopayitavyaḥ C « For I, since I am earnestly intent [on full enlightenment], should not do harm to others ». T bdag-gis lhag-pa'i bsam-pa 'khrug-par bya-ba ma yin-no (362 b 5): « I must not disturb my earnest intention ». T seems to have read adhyāśayo instead of adhyāśayato. If one keeps the reading adhyāśayato, one is forced to consider vikopayitavyaḥ as an error for vikopayitavyaṃ: « I must not let myself be distracted from my earnest intention ». Cf. E. Conze, The Gilgit Manuscript of the Aṣṭādaśasāhasrikā-prajñāpāramitā. Chapters 55 to 70 corresponding to the 5th abhisamaya (Roma, 1962) p. 37, lines 2-3: (adhyāśaya)ś ca me na vikopitavyaḥ.

- P. 275 (W 912; Mi. 479): rūpam kuśalākuśaladharmasamcayavigatam C « it [i.e. form] has no definite boundary like the collection of all wholesome and unwholesome dharmas ». Conze adds aparyantasamam which occurs before. However, it is better to adhere to the text: « Form is free from the accumulation of wholesome and unwholesome dharmas».
- P. 278 (W 930; Mi. 483: asti hi...Māraḥ pāpiyān dharmabhāṇakasya... rūpaśabdagandharasasparšān upasaṃharati sevitum C « For there is always Mara, the Evil One, who may suggest that your teacher tends ... things that can be seen, heard, smelled, tasted or touched ». Upasaṃharati has here the meaning « brings together, provides for someone » (cf. BHSD s.v.). For asti see PW p. 535. « It happens that Māra, the Evil One, presents to the teacher things to be seen, etc. in order to make use of them ».
- P. 279 (W 932; Mi. 485-486): teṣāṃ ca saptaratnamayānāṃ prākārāṇāṃ Jāmbūnadasya suvarṇasya khoḍakasīrṣāṇi pramāṇavanty upodgatāni C « The walls all round that town are made of the seven precious substances. Their well-founded copings slope into the golden river Jambu ». Jāmbūnadasya suvarṇasya is a genitive of matter: « copings made of gold from the Jāmbū river ». See also A 488 (W 934: C 280): Jāmbūnadasya suvarṇasya kadalīvṛkṣo.
- P. 280 (W 935; Mi. 488-489): ye 'pi te sattvās tatra Gandhavatyām nagaryām vāstavyās te 'pi madhye nagarasrngātakasya Dharmodgatasya bodhisattvasya mahāsattvasy' āsanam prajñapayanti suvarnapādakam ... cailavitānam muktāvicitritam, samam sahitā niratāh kim ayam samsthita iti susamsthitavicitravipākatayā dhārayanti, samantāc ca tam prthivīpradeśam pańcavarnikaih kusumair abhyavakiranti - C « And the citizens of that town built a pulpit for the Bodhisattva Dharmodgata in the central square of the town. It has a golden base ... there is an awning shining with pearls, even and firm. All round that pulpit flowers of the five colours are strewed ». — « ... there is an awning shining with pearls. [The citizens wondering whether the pulpit] was well established, hold it up, in like manner united and rejoicing, through the well-established ripening of their various deeds, and they strewed all round that place flowers of the five colours ». See T (which omits niratāh): ci 'di legs-par gnas-sam sñam-pa / legs-par gnas-pa sna-tshogs-pa rnam-par smin-pas lhan-cig-tu mñam-par rab-tu 'dzin-par byed-cin (418 b 5-6).
- P. 285 (W 947; Mi. 498) kāraṇāṇ; P. 286 (W 949; Mi. 500); P. 287 (W 952; Mi. 504): kāraṇāṇ C « treatment ». Better « torture, torment », cf. BHSD s.v. For this meaning PW quotes one passage from the Daśakumāracaritam (= ed. M.R. Kale, Delhi, 1966, p. 92.4-5): drakṣyasi pāram aṣṭādaśānāṇ kāraṇānām. See also p. 174.4-5: yad eṣa narakākaḥ kāraṇānāṃ nārakīṇāṇ rasajñānāya nītaḥ.